

photo

1

DANIEL ALCAZAR/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

2

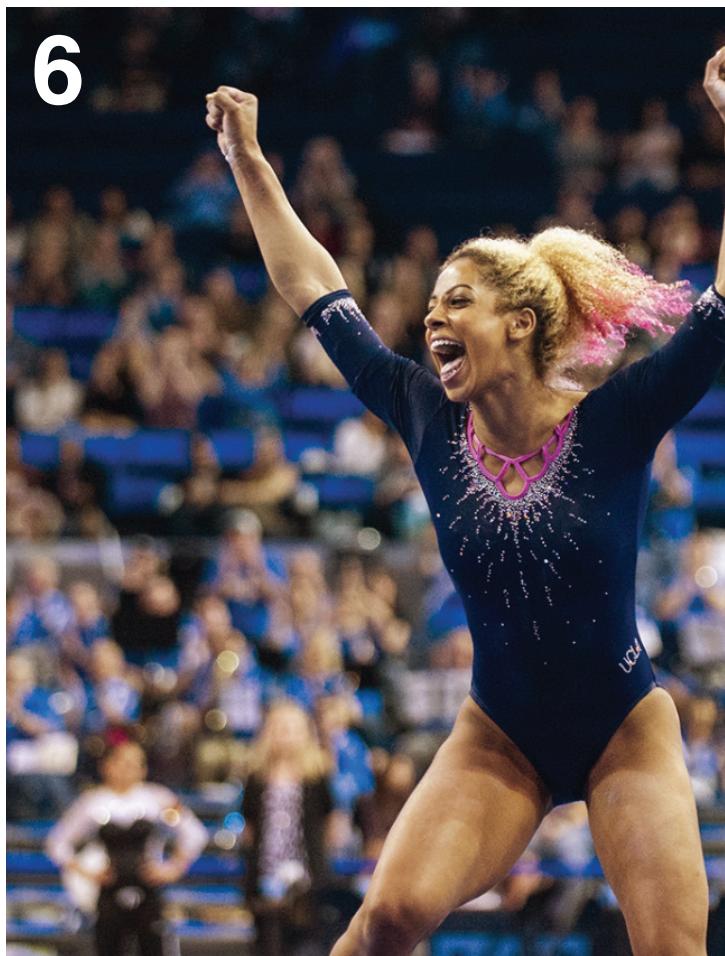

3

AUBREY YEO/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

6

FALL

1 Students march to Chancellor Gene Block's office during a Black Bruins Matter rally, held in response to the "Kanye Western" party thrown by Sigma Phi Epsilon.

2 Hundreds of UCLA students gather in Wilson Plaza for the 2015 Beat 'SC bonfire and rally.

3 The men's water polo team hoists the NCAA championship trophy, capping off an undefeated season.

WINTER

4 Second-year theater student Chris Pree released his mixtape "Here&Now," a compilation of poetry set to R&B tunes composed on his keyboard.

5 Both students and non-students march in protest against sexual harassment from faculty, in response to a Title IX lawsuit filed against Gabriel Piterberg.

6 Senior gymnast Danusia Francis claimed the all-around title during a win over Oregon State on Feb. 13.

7

YEAR OTOS

4

EFREN PINON/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

ANGIE WANG/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

AUBREY YEO/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

SPRING

7 Danny Siegel celebrates being elected as the next USAC president. He and eight other fellow Bruins United candidates secured seats on the council for next year.

8 Laura Savage, a third-year sociology student, took home the top honors for her original song “Once” at UCLA’s Spring Sing 2016.

9 Over a thousand UCLA students attend a vigil in memory of professor William Klug, who was killed in a murder-suicide on campus.

JINTAK HAN/ASSISTANT PHOTO EDITOR

DANIEL ALCAZAR/DAILY BRUIN SENIOR STAFF

9

STEPHANIE CHOY/DAILY BRUIN

Facing oneself unmasked |||

1

Brooke Houser, a second-year psychology student, developed bulimia nervosa in middle school, triggered by self-loathing and anxiety centered mostly around her body image and eating habits.

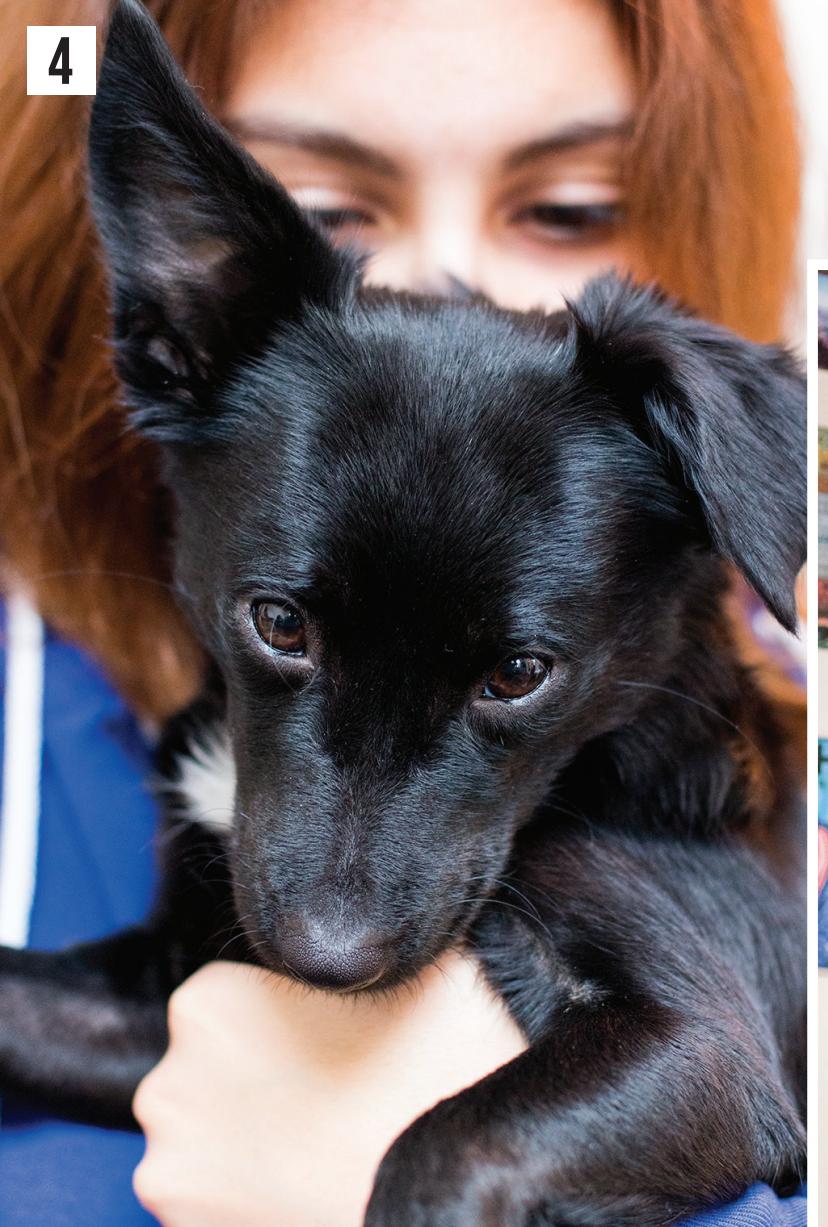

2

Mali, a third-year French student with a minor in English, has depression and anxiety. She states that the recent adoption of a dog, Nala, from a kill shelter left an indelible mark. "Nala's high spirits evoke mine," Mali said.

3

"I'm still learning that it's okay to admit that sometimes I'm not okay, that I deserve mental health care without a diagnosis, and that my mental health is nothing to be ashamed of," said Danielle de Bruin, a third-year sociology student.

4

3

5

Conve
highlig

6

6

versations often shy away from the topic of mental health. UCLA students speak up about their mental health through a gallery highlighting their experiences. They hope to destigmatize these issues by openly discussing and actively seeking ways to face them.

2

1

Eren Ng, a third-year political science student, has struggled with major depressive and anxiety disorders. They are rooted in his struggle with self-identification in a cis-heteronormative world. "I've learned to live unapologetically because I have a right to exist," Ng said. "I'm just another human being trying to live my best life."

2

"Unresolved trauma, sexual assault coupled with my Korean Christian roots and post-traumatic stress disorder were a challenge especially when I wanted to live myself authentically as a man," said Bo Hwang, a fourth-year gender studies student. He manages his bipolar disorder through lifting weights. "You gotta feel to heal it."

7

6

"Depression taught me how to help others who are going through depression, especially in cultures where emotions are less spoken of or where depression is not a common subject," said Will Huynh, a fourth-year chemistry/materials science student.

7

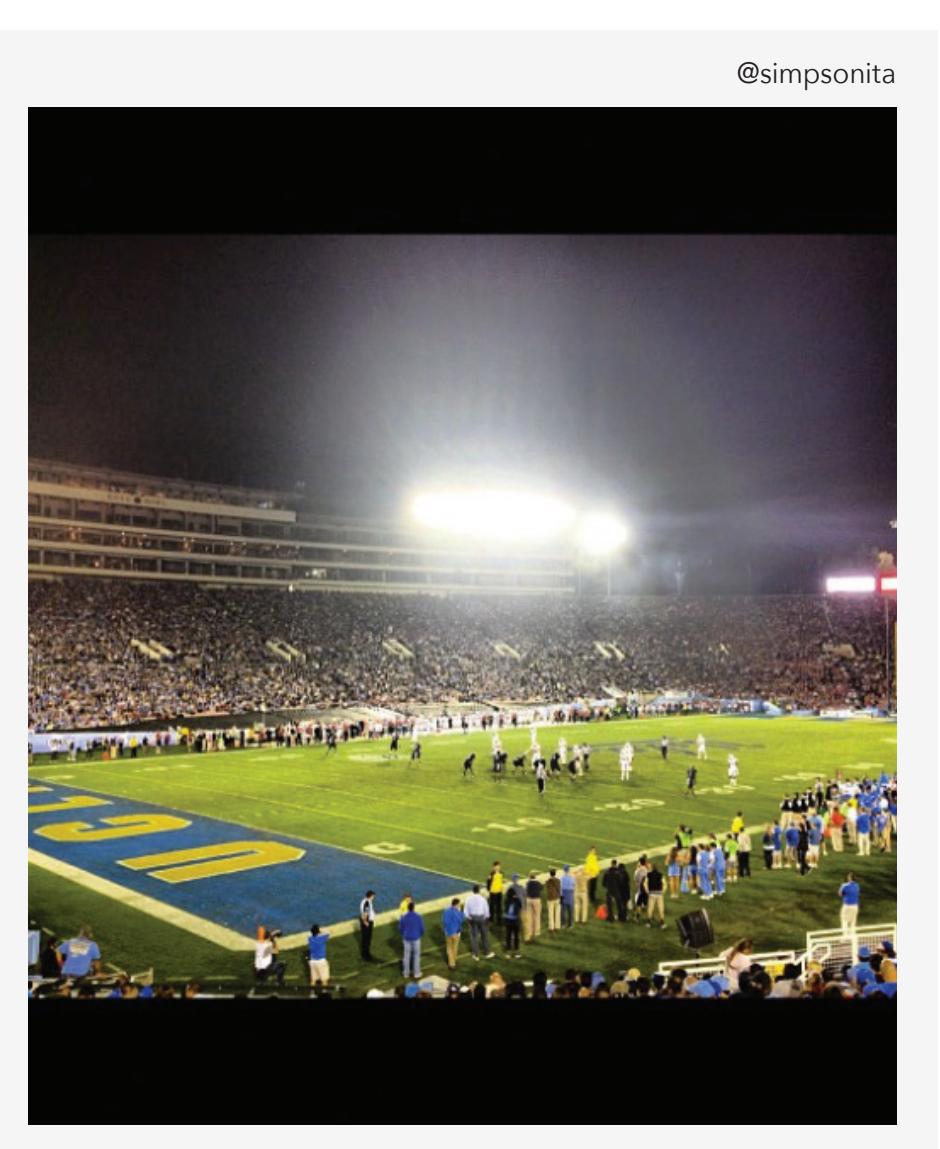

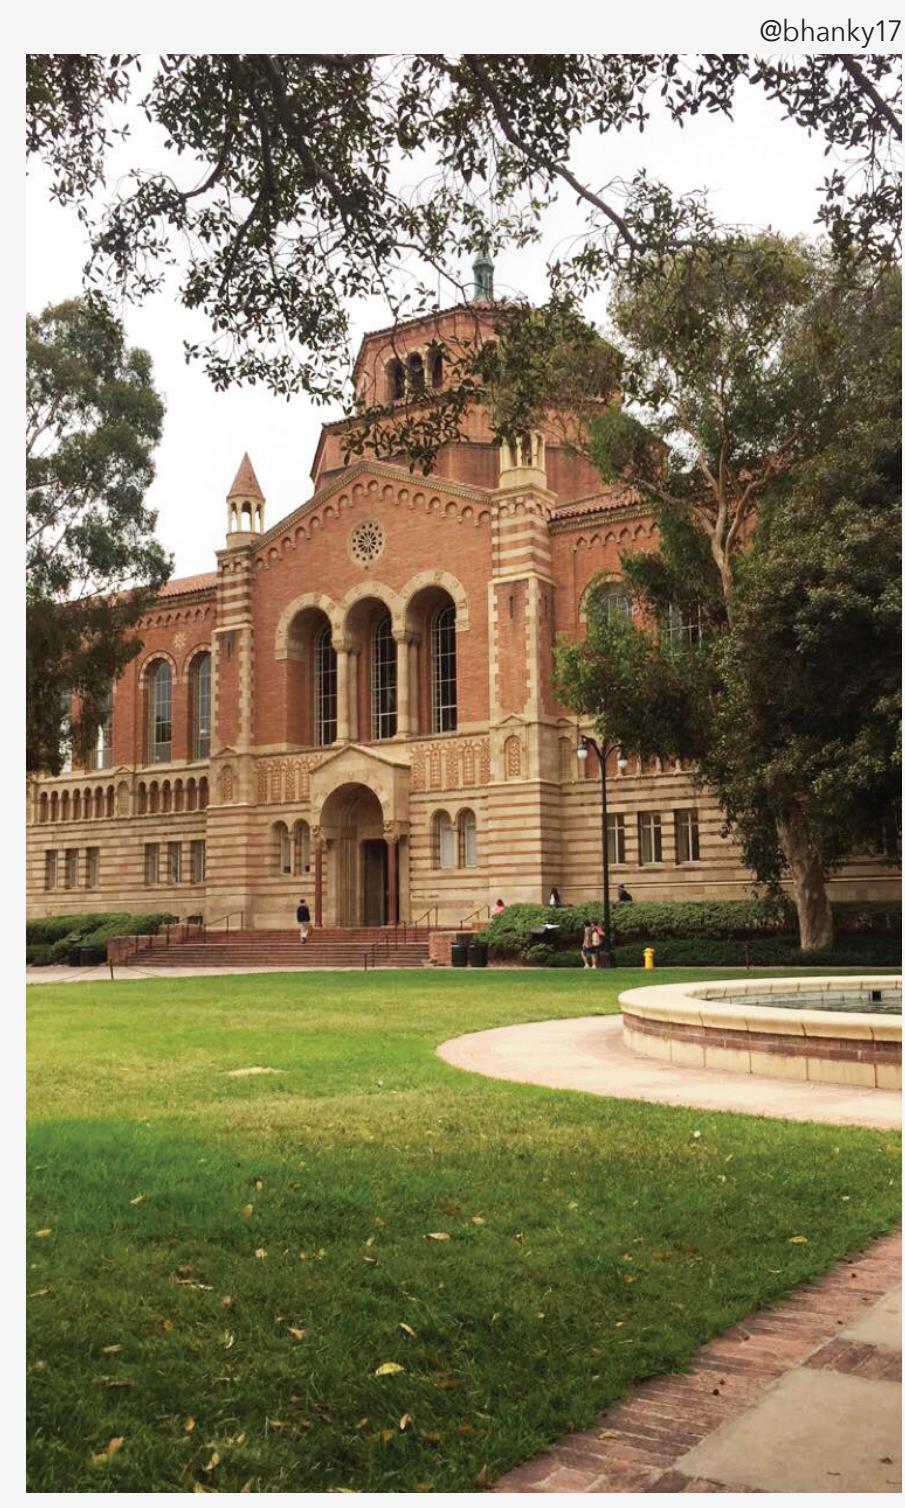

Zinnia, a fourth-year international development studies student, has anxiety and bipolar disorder. She is also a Photo contributor for the Daily Bruin. Zinnia has kept her tumultuous journey silent for fear of making others uncomfortable. "Holding a mask of normalcy in front of my face is the real burden," Zinnia said. "My 'arms' are tired."

8

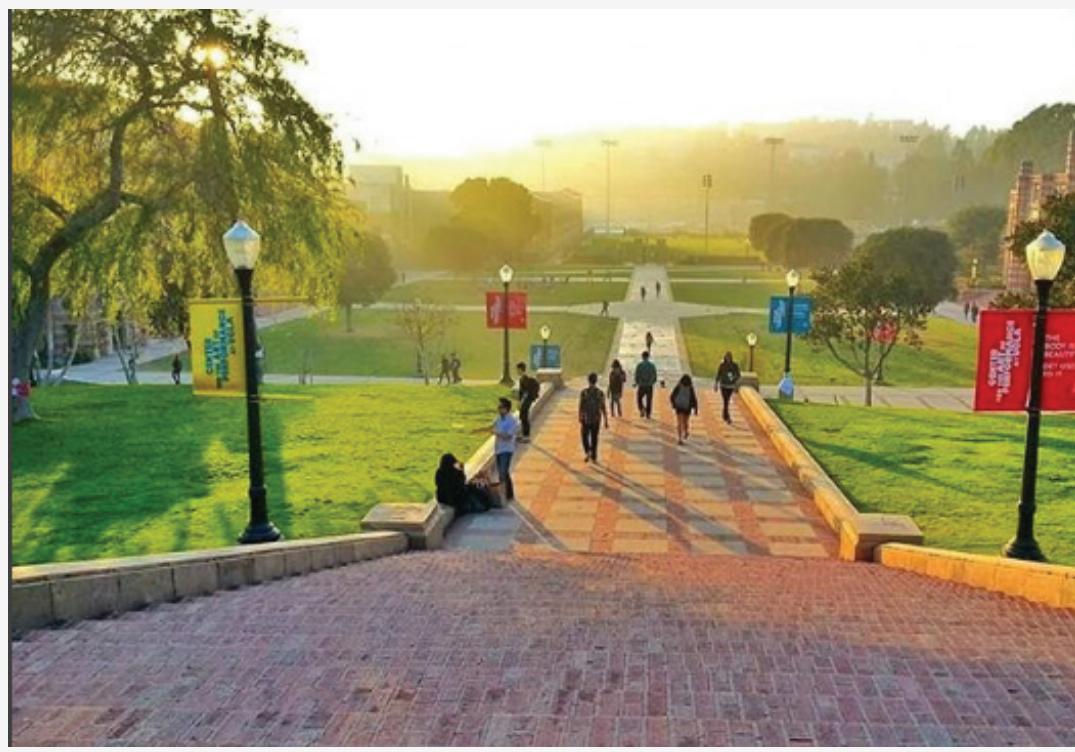

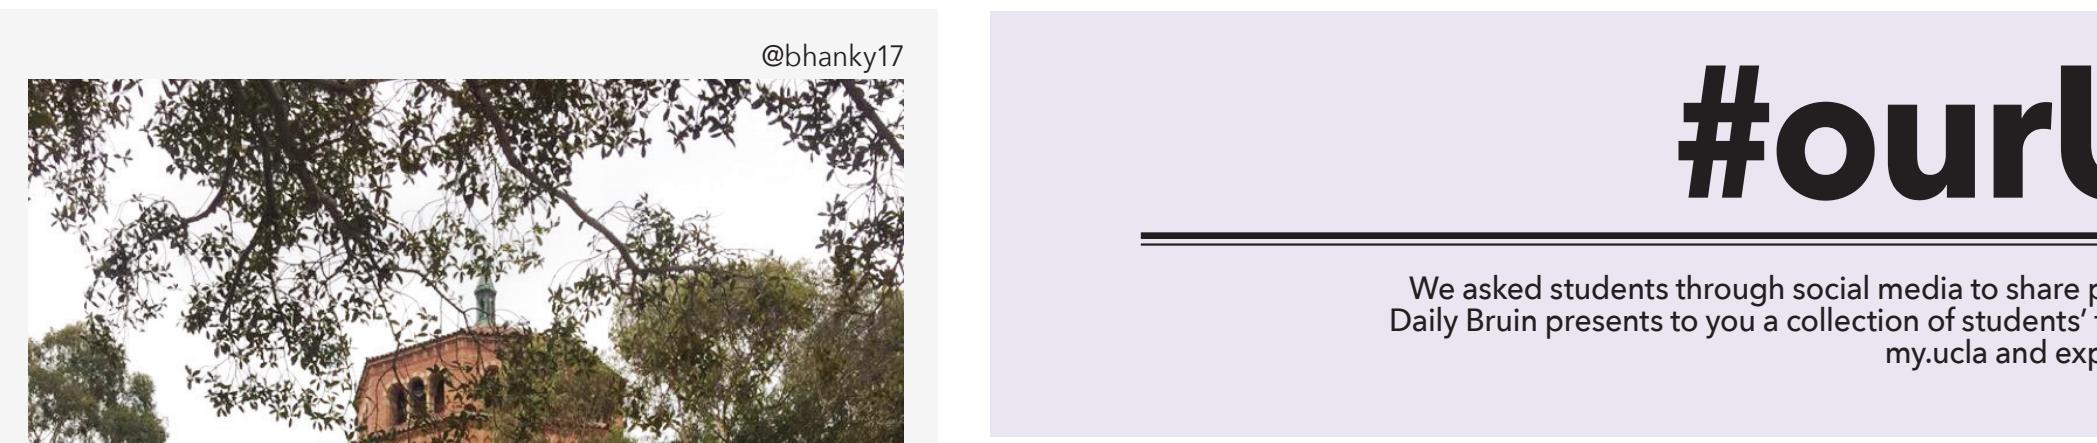

Houser is a proponent of recovery through self-care and reconnecting with oneself. "Everyone has a unique experience with mental health and each experience is important and valid," Houser said.

8

fans didn't 8-clap loud enough... it's ok... we'll get them on Friday!
#GOBRUINS #ourUCLA

Fiat Lux. Let these always be light. It never ceases to amaze me how despite everything, we keep going, together... always an inspiration in the golden souls of everyone on this campus // #O

There's one week left until graduation so this #flashbackfriday we're throwing it back to #Andie students' orientation in the fall of 2014.

UCLA

photos of what they love the most about UCLA. The favorite aspects of our school. Take a step away from #Explore Our UCLA.

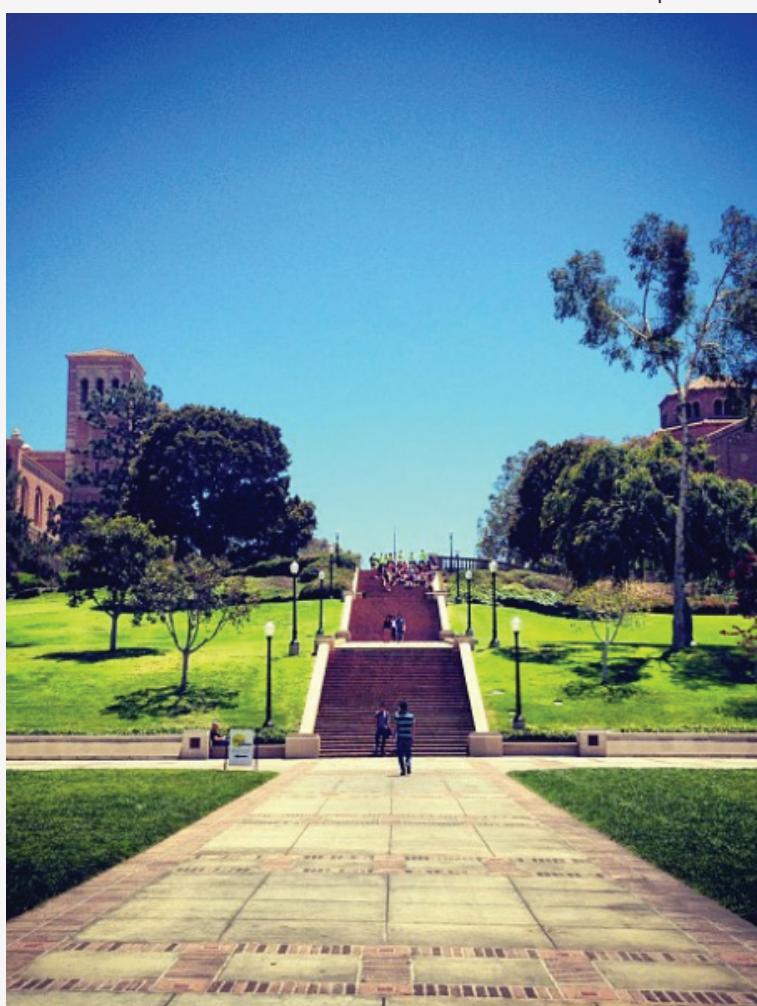

@mister_louis

@byugar

lowkey going to miss taking the most amazing naps here
#ourucla.

@followneel

@simpsonita

I work 5 min from my old campus and never visit.. should visit more often UCLA fight fight fight!

keep on urUCLA

laanderson

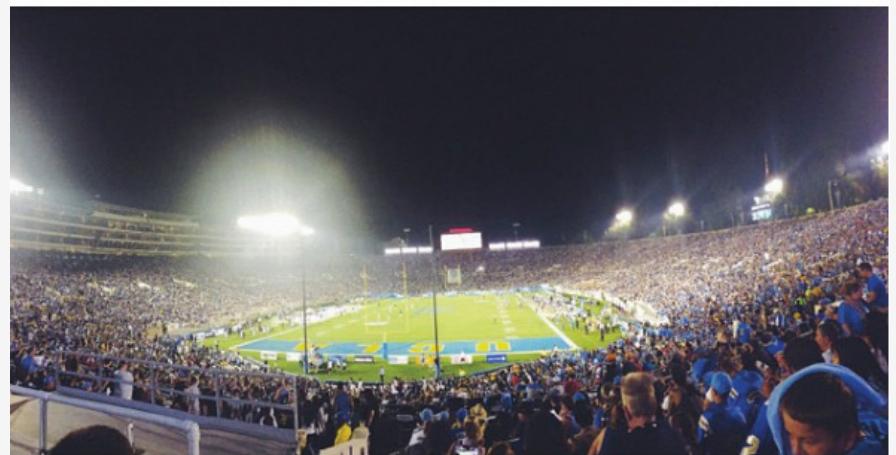

@jakeholton

Summer is going to be long without you #UCLA #ourUCLA

@bhanky17

@simpsonita

welcome home bruins! #OurUCLA

@ru_shah

Spirit committee family portrait #uclarelay

@Elenchi

What I do at UCLA when I'm not in Powell or in class. Getting Holi.

derson2016

INTEREST-FREE LOANS FOR EMERGENCY NEEDS

The Jewish Free Loan Association's Emergency Loan Fund offers interest-free loans of up to $3,000 to individuals and families of all faiths in the Greater Los Angeles area.

Loans Available for:

- Housing or moving costs
- Medical and dental expenses
- Auto repair and basic transportation needs
- Family emergencies
- Job training & employment

To apply call or visit our website at www.jfla.org/apply

and fill out a pre-loan application.

323.761.8830
818.344.1072

www.jfla.org
info@jfla.org

JEWISH FREE LOAN
ASSOCIATION